3rd Annual

MENTORING SUMMIT

California State University, Fresno

October 24, 2014

*A Call to Action:
Transforming Our World
Through Mentoring*

KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Kay Iwata is an internationally recognized and respected management consultant, researcher and author. She has over 25 years of experience in Diversity and Inclusion, strategic planning, assessment, action planning, performance coaching, and leadership and management development and training. Culture and leadership are the two critical components to creating high performance organizations. Successful cultures have systems and practices that focus on the organizational capability to tap the full potential of its diverse workforce. Ms. Iwata has developed an effective cultural assessment model, one that integrates the qualitative with the quantitative. The analysis directs actions and resources to areas of opportunities that maximize the ability of the organization to fully utilize talent and serve its customer base. The second component is to identify, develop and engage diverse talent throughout the organization. Ms. Iwata has worked extensively with leaders and their teams in a variety of effective developmental processes.
